ARTIST'S WORKSHOP

artist DIRECTORY

We hear it at house tours, at gallery openings, at Mary's book signings—wherever HOME COMPANION fans gather. Heck, sometimes we even wonder about it ourselves! "That fabulous artist I read about in your magazine a few years ago...whatever happened to her/him?" So our curiosity got the better of us and we decided to find out. On the following pages, you'll see updates on many of our featured artists, plus current contact information. Although the artists have gone through changes over the years, all of them have one thing in common: they're still following their muse and creating art.

anna CORBA

collage artist, designer

what's new

Anna's handcrafted product line is featured in specialty shops across the country, and she's just completed her first book, Vintage Paper Craft, scheduled for release this October. "Artful objects, well made, speak to the soul—and that's important," says Anna, who lives and works in a sun-filled Santa Rosa, California, studio.

jil SMITH

lampshade maker

what's new

Jil has moved into a new studio since the last time we saw her. "I needed more room—I now have a son!" More than 100 of her jaunty rice-paper shades hang in Seattle's acclaimed Dahlia Lounge, and her work is sold in many upscale shops. Visit www.wiredwomenseattle.com.

joan BUGNITZ

illustrator, sculptor

what's new

Colored pencils, a sharp knife, and an even sharper imagination—these are the tools Joan uses to explore her muse. The Florissant, Missouri-based artist continues to work on small ceramic sculptures and fanciful illustrations like the ones that delighted our readers.
